"Drawing, painting and sculpting are all different ways for me to explore the human form.

My intention isn't to capture an ideal or present the pinnacle of beauty. I distort and exaggerate certain physical features to capture, amplify and accentuate the essence of my subjects.

Simply Simon

Charcoal on Canson Lavis Technique

I look for interesting faces, for details that I can interpret, for ways to heighten what I see.

I'm drawn to a bold, resilient beauty that's imperfect and asymmetrical... the rare magnetism of men and women who are truly comfortable in their skin."
